Abstract

The collective labour conflicts and how to solve them in the Jordanian labour law

Shawkat Mohamad AL-Marazqa AL-Btoosh

Mu'tah University, 2008

This study discusses the issue of the collective conflicts and how to solve them. The subject is devided into four chapters. The preface discusses the collective labour contract according to its definition and how it differs from the indindual labour contract. and its influences.

The first chapter discusses the collective labourers' conflict according its definition and how it differs from the individual labourers' conflict and the results of both conflicts.

The second chapter discusses the forcing procedures of solving the conflicts such as striking out and stopping any trading work.

The third chapter discusses the peaceful means to solve the collective labour conflicts. These means include the direct negotiation, conciliation and the labour court.

This study also discusses how these means are suitable to solve the collective labourers' conflicts.
